

Dear Future Me,

I hope you are not in the kind of situation I am currently in – COVID 19. You probably don't even remember the conditions and the amount of suffering going on around us. It isn't easy being in lockdown. My parents are still going to work as normally as they did before this problem arose, but me and my brother? We haven't left the house to do anything; we are way too worried. You, on the other hand? Probably relaxing, having the best time. I wish I could leave the house and do all the normal things I used to, but there is no point. The consequences could be bad. I want everything to be over. I want to go back to school, see my friends and everything beyond that. I am obviously having a bit of fun inside the house, but you are probably having a lot more. I love spending time in the garden, with my family. It's great. However, I can't stop thinking about my relatives. For some people, relatives are nearby; just in a different town. For me? You will probably understand unless you have moved house or something. My relatives are all over the world! We live in a small town, but relatives? They live in London, Italy, Sheffield, France, Norway, Canada, Switzerland, Sri Lanka, everywhere! I mean, it's alright to talk over the phone but I want to see them. Thinking about what could possibly happen to them, makes me shiver. Despite that, I know everyone will get through it. Food, hasn't been a bad problem and I know it's a serious problem for others. I am hoping that the people out there who have this problem are doing alright. So far, one of the only things keeping me busy is the Top 10 Challenge for school. I don't know where you will be right now but I'm hoping it's something good! Anyway, I did this amazing shaving foam project for an art homework and it was so fun! I played with pink shaving foam for literally 30 minutes! This probably won't sound very fun to you but it was to me! These are the types of things that keep me happy. What about you? By the way, I don't really know how hygienic you are, but me, I have so many hand sanitisers that I either found in random places from times when nobody barely used them, or recently bought ones. I feel so much cleaner now. COVID 19 has really made a change in my life and it's made me think about how life was in those days when there were no substances called medicines, no doctors, nothing to take care of you. That is how it feels. There is no cure right now. I'm hoping there will be, and everything gets solved very soon. Listen, you don't know, well, I won't know that, wait, I'm confusing myself and you, which is me. Ok, I'll stop. Seriously, so many lives are being harmed and are on the risk of losing their life! I don't want to be in that situation which only gives me the choice to never leave the house (unless it's just the garden). It's harder than you think, well I think. Future me, hope you are well and COVID 19 hasn't made a return just yet!

Yours Sincerely,

Me, Dillany, your 5-years-ago-self
